For novice coaches (both indoor and beach volleyball) who need to be able to teach basic skills and tactics, and prepare athletes for low-level competitions. Athletes are generally trained on a seasonal basis. Fun is an important part of the athletes' sport experience. Specialization is not a priority at this stage, and sport experiences generally provide an opportunity to teach values and develop social skills. Coaches will be expected to participate in a series of learning experiences designed to assist them in improving their volleyball coaching abilities and to have those coaching abilities assessed throughout the course. These activities represent the minimum standard for the training and certification of DC volleyball coaches within the new NCCP.

Upon completion of DC, the coach will have the choice of two different coaching certification routes based upon whether they coach beach volleyball or indoor volleyball. For both disciplines, the ADC program builds upon the concepts presented in the DC Volleyball Certification Program. ADC coaches help athletes refine basic skills and tactics, teach more advanced skills and tactics, and prepare them for provincial or national level competitions. Athletes are usually training several times a week on a seasonal or annual basis to improve performance. Although having a good time remains an important part of the athletes' sport experience, the outcome of competitions is of greater importance, as athletes may have to meet pre-determined performance standards. Major concepts dealt with are skill variation, advanced team systems, position specialization, running cohesive practices, and seasonal planning and periodization concepts are introduced.
